

An aerial photograph of a residential area in Vienna. The central focus is a large, light-colored building with a prominent red-tiled roof and a central tower-like structure. It is surrounded by other houses with similar architectural styles, including red-tiled roofs and light-colored facades. There are several green trees and a small courtyard area around the central building. A parking lot with several cars is visible to the left. The overall scene depicts a typical urban residential environment in a historic city.
